HONGKONG, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 14, 1904.

COULD anything show more clearly the absolute indifference of the Government with regard to the preservation of peace and good order in the colony than the events which have transpired in the western district of this city during the last few days? In the consequence of some dispute about a matter which only the lowest class of Chinese can understand—and we doubt whether even they understand it—there has been a reign of terror in the district mentioned for four days. With the nature of the dispute we are not concerned. It is an understood thing in this colony that the Chinese portion of the community should be allowed a certain amount of latitude—such as the extent of infringing on the laws of the colony—under that, they may not be prevented from following time-honoured customs. But it was not contemplated that these customs should include clan fights or promiscuous murder. These items, however, seem to have been regarded by the present Government as included in the list of Chinese customs with which it would be injudicious to interfere. It may be a matter of small importance to His Excellency Sir William Robinson, and two parties of Chinese, who come from different parts of Kweichow, have been shooting and killing each other during the last few days, apparently on account of the fact that they were not a born in the same district. It may be a matter of no interest to the Government (seeing that it does not and pensions) that Chinese fellow-citizens indulge in the cheap but exciting pastime of killing each other in the public streets. But the members of the community who are not Government officials cannot look on these things with official composure. The trade of the colony would be admitted even by the Government to be a matter of some importance to the community generally, and as such disturbed by the acts of these lawless Chinese, as they are. It has been a long time since the Government has taken any steps to interfere seriously with trading in the imperative duty of the Government to use the speediest and most effective measures to stop them. In the present case it was the immediate duty of His Excellency, Sir William Robinson, as soon as he knew that the disturbance was going on, to issue a proclamation investing the Police with special powers provided under the Preservation Ordinance. Why this was not done was entirely a loss of nerve. The necessity for doing so has only now been recognised, when the trouble appears to be over. There have been four days of panic in the entire district of the colony; four days of interrupted business; four days during which a considerable portion of the city was practically in the hands of gangs of Chinese ruffians and hired assassins, and the peace of the official mind has apparently not been disturbed. The whole trouble would have been easily enough at the onset, but even if by investing the police with special powers it may now be brought to an end, the efficiency of the Government to preserve peace and order in the colony must have fallen a good many points in the estimation of the Chinese. The manner in which this deplorable business has been dealt with is certainly disgraceful to the Government.

THE LIBERAL PROGRAMME.
London, 12th March, 1894.

At a meeting of the Liberal party, Mr. Rosebery declared his intention of adhering to Home Rule, and of the libel of Mr. Gladstone's last speech in the House of Commons against the House of Lords, the constitution of which, he said, is anomalous, and the House itself, since it obeyed the dictates of the leader of a winning party, has become a danger to the Country. He further stated that the Government's use of all constitutional means to represent the Country the dangers attaching to it, are an anomaly.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

The speech referred to negotiations with Russia regarding questions in Central Asia, which was stated to be proceeding satisfactorily. No reference was made to Home Rule Bill. Full and adequate provisions will be made for the defence of the Empire.

An Anglo-Chinese Convention has been signed for fixing the boundary between Burma and China.
